NEW CONSTRUCTION EXCLUSION FROM SUPPLEMENTAL ASSESSMENT

In 1985, the California State Legislature amended the Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 75.12, to provide for an exclusion of new construction from Supplemental Assessment if the owner's intent is to offer the property for sale upon completion. This amendment does not exclude new construction intended for rental, lease, owner occupancy, or other uses of the property, except as model homes. It also does not exclude re-assessment of completed or partially completed construction as of the January 1st lien date each year for the annual Assessment Roll.

Effective January 1, 2006 (Revenue & Taxation Code 75.12, (1) Section B), builders will be automatically excluded from a supplement assessment on new construction if the property they are building will be offered for sale, and:

- it is subdivided into five or more parcels
- a map describing the parcels has been recorded, and
- the zoning regulations or building permits for the parcels require that single-family residences will be constructed on them.

Look at the law to find out if you automatically qualify or if other conditions apply to your situation. You may find further information at www.leginfo.ca.gov/calaw.html (search Revenue & Taxation Code 75.12).

The following questions (and answers) represent those asked most frequently:

Q. I'm planning on building three new houses, but the financing has not come through yet. Can I apply for the exclusion now?

A. Yes. As long as you apply before construction begins, or within 30 days following the start of construction.

Q. I have purchased an old house, which I am going to add on to and then sell, so do I qualify for the exclusion?

A. If your intent is to sell the property and you do not occupy, rent, lease or otherwise use the property, it is possible that you will qualify. In this case, the assessed value of the addition may be excluded from a supplemental assessment.

Q. I started construction six months ago and have only recently heard about this exclusion. May I file a retroactive claim for the exclusion?

A. No. To be eligible for this exclusion, the claim form must be submitted prior to, or within 30 days, following the start of the construction.
